

HEROIC FIREMEN FIGHT FAKE FIRE IN MOVIE PLANT

Drench Actors and Actresses and Turn Drama Film
Into Real Comedy.

The directors of a motion picture plant at Elm avenue and East Fifteenth street, Flatbush, are congratulating themselves over the neat trick by which a portion of the city fire department was made to take part in a three-reel comedy drama yesterday afternoon. The actors, including Miss Lilian Walker and Maurice Costello, were not in the secret apparently and do not share their employers' enjoyment.

The big moment of the picture drama was a spectacular fire scene, in which the hero, Miss Walker, was to be rescued by the heroic Mr. Costello. Of course there were other rescues and leaps for life performed by lesser members of the company, but the scene had been planned to work up to the Walker-Costello episode.

Out in the yard of the plant—which is surrounded by a high fence—the stage director, Jimmy Young, had constructed the four-story front of an imitation brick dwelling. A busy crew of property men liberally supplied with red fire, smoke-bombs and the other appurtenances of a mimic conflagration, were set to work and in a few moments volumes of flame and smoke rose from the company's inclosure.

At this moment some one turned in a fire alarm. In a few minutes the apparatus from Lawrence avenue reached

ARREST C. THALHEIM, BIG IMPORTER, FOR FRAUDS IN CUSTOMS

United States Said to Be Out
$150,000 Through Conspiracy Long Existing.

Systematic customs frauds by which it is estimated the United States Government has lost $150,000 were revealed today through the arraignment before United States Commissioner Shields of Carl Thalheim, President of C. Thalheim & Co., importers of artificial flowers, feathers and straw braid at No. 11 West Fourth street. He is the first of the alleged conspirators to be taken. Another is to be arrested upon his arrival in this country from Europe. United States District Attorney Addison A. Pratt demanded that the prisoner be held under $10,000 bail, and this was done.

SUBWAY SMOKER FINED.

First Cigarette in Five Years Costs
Joel a Dollar.

"This is the first time I've gotten out of bed so early in the morning in eleven years and the first time I've smoked a cigarette in five years, and of course I have to be arrested," said Joel Rinaldo, owner of Joel's restaurant at Seventh avenue and Forty-first street, when arraigned today in the West Side Court. Rinaldo was caught in the Times square subway station with a lighted cigarette in his hand. When Magistrate Murphy heard the story he fined Rinaldo $1, commenting as he did so, "I've taken into consideration what you have said and therefore will be lenient."

WALKS IN AND DRINKS RED INK AND PASTE

Terrible Tussle to Arrest Giant
Visitor to Barge
Office.

The door of the barge office blew open and he walked in. The office was filled with Customs inspectors, immigration officers and doctors, such as are usually gathered at the Battery awaiting the coming of steamers, and the coming and going of boats from and to Ellis Island. The newcomer was six feet, two inches tall, swarthy, black mustache and eyes which looked like lightning. He reached for a bottle of mulligatawny and drank the contents. He emptied a bottle of red ink for a chaser.

Dr. Francis Donnelly gulped and jumped at him. Immigration Inspector George Moore grabbed him by the legs and the three men went to the floor. But the newcomer got another bottle of red ink as he fell and what he didn't spill over his assailants, went down his throat. He broke from his captors and grabbed a bottle of blue writing fluid. He was on a second bottle of mulligatawny when Policeman Frank Roth burst into the office and grabbed him. Deeks were bumped, chairs overturned and tables knocked about. By the time an ambulance arrived the inmate was ready for it.

At the Greenwich police station he couldn't give his name because the mulligatawny made his lips stick and he couldn't open his mouth. Over the blotter, he made a grab for a bottle of red ink on the sergeant's desk. He was then rushed to the psychiatric ward at Bellevue. After they had steamed his lips open and applied blotting paper to his tongue he said his name was Peter John, of Macedonia, N. Y. He was held for observation.
